Modernity And Self Identity Society

A brief post covering the relationship between self and society in late-modernity according to Anthony Giddens, covering concepts such as Globalisation, abstract systems, ontological security, manufactured risks, narcissism and fundamentalism. This is very much my own reading of Giddens' text - Modernity and Self-Identity: Self and Society in the Late Modern Age.

AND SOCIETY IN THE LATE MODERN

AGE. By Anthony Giddens. Cambridge, England: Polity Press, 1991. Pp. vii, 256.

During the past two decades, there has been a dizzying acceleration of books, articles, conferences, focusing on the interrelated problems of modernity, modernism, and postmodernism.

interesting book that explores how modernity impacts self identity. The basic argument of the book is that modern society provides us with many choices that we can make to mitigate the risks we face in life. In pre-modern society, for example, people lived in one spot and were essentially constrained to take the natural circumstances given to them.

control or mastery which parallels the overall orientation of modern institutions towards 'colonising the future'. Yet it also helps promote tendencies which place that orientation radically in question - and which provide the substance of a new political agenda for late modernity.

Modernity and self-identity : self and society in the late ...

The new mechanisms of self-identity shape and are shaped by the institutions of modernity and Sociology is a fundamental part of the institutional reflexivity of modernity. There is a basic dialectic between modern institutions which encourage the repression of 'living out' existential questions in day to day life and the emergence of life-politics which seeks to manifest them.

Late Modern Age Anthony Giddens
Self-identification becomes a reflexive project of each individual in modernity, whereas in pre-modern settings self-identity was largely given, as opposed to made. Individuals create and reform their identities through choice, and due to the reflexive nature of modern self-identification, everyday decisions and behaviour become more relevant
